Political Communications

The Federal eGovernment Strategy 2023 for Austria was adopted on 7 June 2023 by the federal government. The strategy was developed in a collaborative process with the relevant eGovernment stakeholders at national and regional level and pursues an efficient implementation of electronic government services. It is based on the basic premise that all businesses and citizens must be able to perform all the procedures of public administration quickly and easily, electronically and without any specific technical expertise.

Legislations

The Austrian Real Labour Framework Act, which is currently in draft status, is intended to make it easier to test business ideas and innovations in real-life situations. The act will give the respective Ministries the possibility to allow companies in certain areas to try out their ideas in reality. It should also foster innovations in different sectors. Regulatory sandboxes are also under consideration in the act.

Infrastructures

In 2022, a new application called Grants4Companies was developed and released within the Business Service Portal. It offers registered companies an automatically derived list of suitable grants. Grants4Companies uses methods from symbolic AI to evaluate formalised eligibility criteria based on the available company data retrieved from the Austrian Once-Only Platform dadeX, with user consent to obtain the required data from the registries of the public administration.

Governance
